Helpful advice for fathers

By Jonathan M.

I welcomed my first child into the world a few months ago and spend much of those first few weeks worrying that I wasn't going to be able to be the father my child needs me to be. Thankfully I came across this study, which has provided me with excellent and practical fatherhood advice. Mark Merrill and Tony Dungy provided an awesome foundation for me to build upon and I encouraged me to be an All Pro Dad. I just celebrated three months as a father and I seriously don't know where I would be as both a father and husband without the foundation this study laid out for me.

Great fatherhood challenge

By Brian D.

My kids are both teenagers (or at least nearly so), and the challenges of being the best father I can be seem to be ramping up in the teen years. This study was a great reminder of some very important truths for fathers. It challenged me regularly to be more intentional about the conversations I'm havinng with my wife and kids and the lessons I am teaching my kids (both verbally and behaviorally).

Practical and Helpful

By Andy M

I had already read the All Pro Dad book, and this study has helped me to apply the principles in practical ways. I loved having an opportunity to discuss these ideas with a group of friends who are also committed to being the best fathers that they can be. Each week we all walked away with strategic ways that we could be better not only as dads, but husbands as well. Good stuff!
