The Stanley Tool Works was actually a merger of cousins in 1920, Stanley's Bolt Manufactory and Stanley Rule and Level Company. This catalog is before that merger, being published in 1914.

Headquartered in New Briton, Connecticut, the company has become synonymous for tools, but has manufactured hinges, tacks, and just about any hardware imaginable.

This catalog is special in many ways. There are several new items that came out in this period, like rules.

This is an actual reproduction of the actual page. The text can be dark and of low contrast making the text difficult to read. The advantage is the book displays exactly as a consumer would get that year.
